HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Edisto Beach State Park turtle patrol is excited to announce that the first nest of the season has hatched! Our sea turtle specialist, Leah, and our turtle volunteer, Lea, found signs of emergence from nest #1 this morning! There was a large caved-in area underneath the predator screen, and they could still faintly see tiny hatchling tracks headed down the path of the light screen. The light screen helps to guide the hatchlings in the right direction so they can make a direct path to the ocean. Hopefully one of these hatchlings will survive the tough odds to reach adulthood of 1 in 1000. www.southcarolinaparks.com/edisto-beach

Becca L Wilson I was sea title volunteer in FL one of the best things I have ever seen, they are incredible little ones

Rick Carnell That's great, we just missed it. We were there for the find of nest #163. A lot of helpful people there.
We found an iPhone on the beach and it was returned to the owner (hopefully). Be back soon!

Henry Reynolds When I started working with Sally Murphy 30+ years ago, hatchling to adulthood was thought to be 1 in 10,000. Through the efforts of a lot of volunteers over many years, those odds have greatly increased! 💕

Pam Hanley 1/1000 man that's tough. Wonder if some could be hatched in controlled environment and kept to grow to give them a better chance at survival?
