HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Donald Trump aggressively tried to pin the nation's economic and national security problems on Clinton during the first presidential debate of the 2016 election season Monday.

Hillary Clinton in the first presidential debate, belittling the former senator and secretary of state as a "typical politician" of delivering the change many Americans crave. But Trump found himself on the defensive for much of the 90-minute Monday night.

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Donald Trump repeatedly clashed with Hillary Clinton during Monday's first presidential debate, interrupting her and appearing agitated at times as they tangled over the economy, her use of a private mail server and his unwillingness to release his income tax returns. Clinton maintained an even demeanor, smiling indulgently when Trump was aggressive. Clinton and Trump engaged in a vigorous back-and-forth on the debate stage at Hofstra University as they locked in a tight race.
