Balanced Leadership® Institute |
District-Level Leaders
July 21-22, 2016

Discover how a Balanced Leadership approach to improving systems and innovation leads to student and staff success. You'll learn the district-level leadership activities and behaviors that research shows are most connected to student and staff success, and how these leadership responsibilities apply to the actions of superintendents, school boards, and central office staff. Explore the principles of high-reliability systems in complex industries, and how these principles can be effectively applied to education systems. You'll leave with a map of steps toward improving the quality of instruction and reducing variability in instructional quality within and among your schools.

Classroom Instruction
That Works® | Workshop

July 25-27 2016

Perfect for K-12 educators in all subject areas, staff developers, curriculum instructors, and building administrators, this three-day workshop will show you research-based, practice-proven instructional strategies and ways to implement them in the classroom. Discover how each strategy can be effective with any student, at any grade level, in any subject area, to enhance student achievement.

- Learn new, evidence-based insights from the most recent, rigorous research
- Get a framework to strengthen instructional design
- Discover the reasons for choosing certain strategies for certain situations
- Connect the strategies to essential 21st century skills

Whether the strategies are new to you or something you already use every day, this workshop will help you raise your level of effectiveness.
