Cathy Robbins I am in Greensboro and we are eagerly waiting for the first snowflakes to fall- at least I am!! The prediction is for snow, sleet, and very possibly freezing rain with a significant accumulation. I tried to find my camping lanterns but they were packed away after the Atalaya Sleepover and we didn't want to empty out the shed to get them, so I was FORCED to buy the new Coleman lantern I have been looking at since last summer!! I did manage to find some of the smaller flashlights/lanterns and put or replaced the batteries as needed, brought the sleeping bags inside although we do have the old fashioned natural gas heaters with the "forever on/forever paying for pilot lights" but in situations like this, we are thankful we did not upgrade! The ice chests are on the back porch, ready to put perishables in if we do lose power for an extended amount of time. Y'day we got a 50 lb bag of bird food to go with our 40 lb bag, 20 lb of sunflower seeds to refill our stock, 16 lb bag of cat food for the strays (so they won't bother the birds we feed), and we also have pop corn ready to air pop if we run out of bird food. Can't forget our friends in this weather! We also have an area set up that is kinda out of the elements, where we can put the seed and the birds/squirrels can eat out of the rain and snow. How are y'all making out at Huntington Beach State Park and Myrtle Beach State Park this morning? Sure do wish we were there with you!!

at 14:06:04 on 2/12/2014 UTC

Cathy Robbins Y'all be safe over there!! Hope you keep power and that hubby and family are safe!!

at 14:07:31 on 2/12/2014 UTC

Sue Gettig My pup is upset that we aren't doing our daily walk at Sesquicentennial. Instead we are hunkered down playing the new LEGO video game, watching TV and prepared to move to the RV if we lose power.

at 14:21:48 on 2/12/2014 UTC

Melissa Lynne Watching cartoons in our pjs with my husband and son, staying warm, listening to the sleet/freezing rain hit the house. Wishing for nicer weather getting that camping itch!!

at 14:30:40 on 2/12/2014 UTC
