Fifth Annual Emerging Markets Forum: Entrepreneurship for a Global Marketplace

April 24, 2015

8:30AM-3:30PM

Pavilion

<http://files.ctctcdn.com/229d4de8001/96613d36-73d2-4ab8-ad0d-e697c1124fbe.jpg>

The nature of entrepreneurship is evolving, with startups needing to think globally from their very inception. Entrepreneurs need to be able to exploit opportunities in global markets and to have the wherewithal to overcome the challenges involved in operating there. Competition for capital has become more global as venture capital firms look increasingly outwards, particularly at emerging markets. A vibrant start-up culture is taking root in emerging markets, and this spirit of entrepreneurship holds great potential for improving the lot of some of the world's poorest people. Policy makers in rich and poor countries alike feel an urgent need to stimulate innovation and entrepreneurship.

Please join the fifth Emerging Markets Forum, where a distinguished group of speakers will discuss the challenges of global entrepreneurship from both a policy and a practice perspective.
