Human Trafficking in South Carolina

A bill that will allow the state grand jury to investigate suspected sex traffickers h state legislature. Once the Governor signs it, it goes into effect.

S.C. Attorney General Alan Wilson pushed for the bill, -- calling it a top legislative measure would give prosecutors and local law enforcement a new weapon a trafficking--which some call-- modern-day slavery.

The ability to send cases to the State Grand Jury means they're no longer restr jurisdictional boundaries. The fix means human traffickers can no longer hide by s county to county.

This week on OnPoint on WACH Human Trafficking in South Carolina-- it's a bi than most realize.

Empire, On-screen Relationships & Real L

Empire is the hottest new show on TV right now. What's the appeal? Many point to the intense, albeit passionate relationship between Cookie & Luscious Lyon.

Are there common themes in today's TV dramas that we want in our own relationships? Are we attracted to Cookies 'ride or die' commitment to Luscious & her family? Do we connect to Cookie's smart, confident & powerful persona that isn't afraid of her vulnerabilities?

Do today's shows like Empire, Scandal, & Being Mary Jane give us insight into our relationships? How much would you sacrifice for the woman or man you love? How much would you be willing to forgive to stay together?

This week on OnPoint-- On-screen relationships and how they effect our beliefs about

Dante Lewis: Behind The Scenes

We all know Dante Lewis for his powerful sax skills, what you probably didn't know is that he didn't really choose music, instead, music chose him.

It was his grandfather who introduced him to music and encouraged him to pick up the saxophone in high school.

"When I got to middle school I wanted to play drums but my grandfather said oh NO! You are going to play saxophone because drummers have to constantly compete for a spot." Dante said. "I didn't mind playing the saxophone because either way, music has always been in my soul."

Music may have always been in his soul, but it wasn't always on his mind. While attending Eau Claire high school, Dante was an honor student and served as Vice President of the National Honors Society. He attended the University of South Carolina-Upstate, where he majored in business and graduated with a degree in engineering.

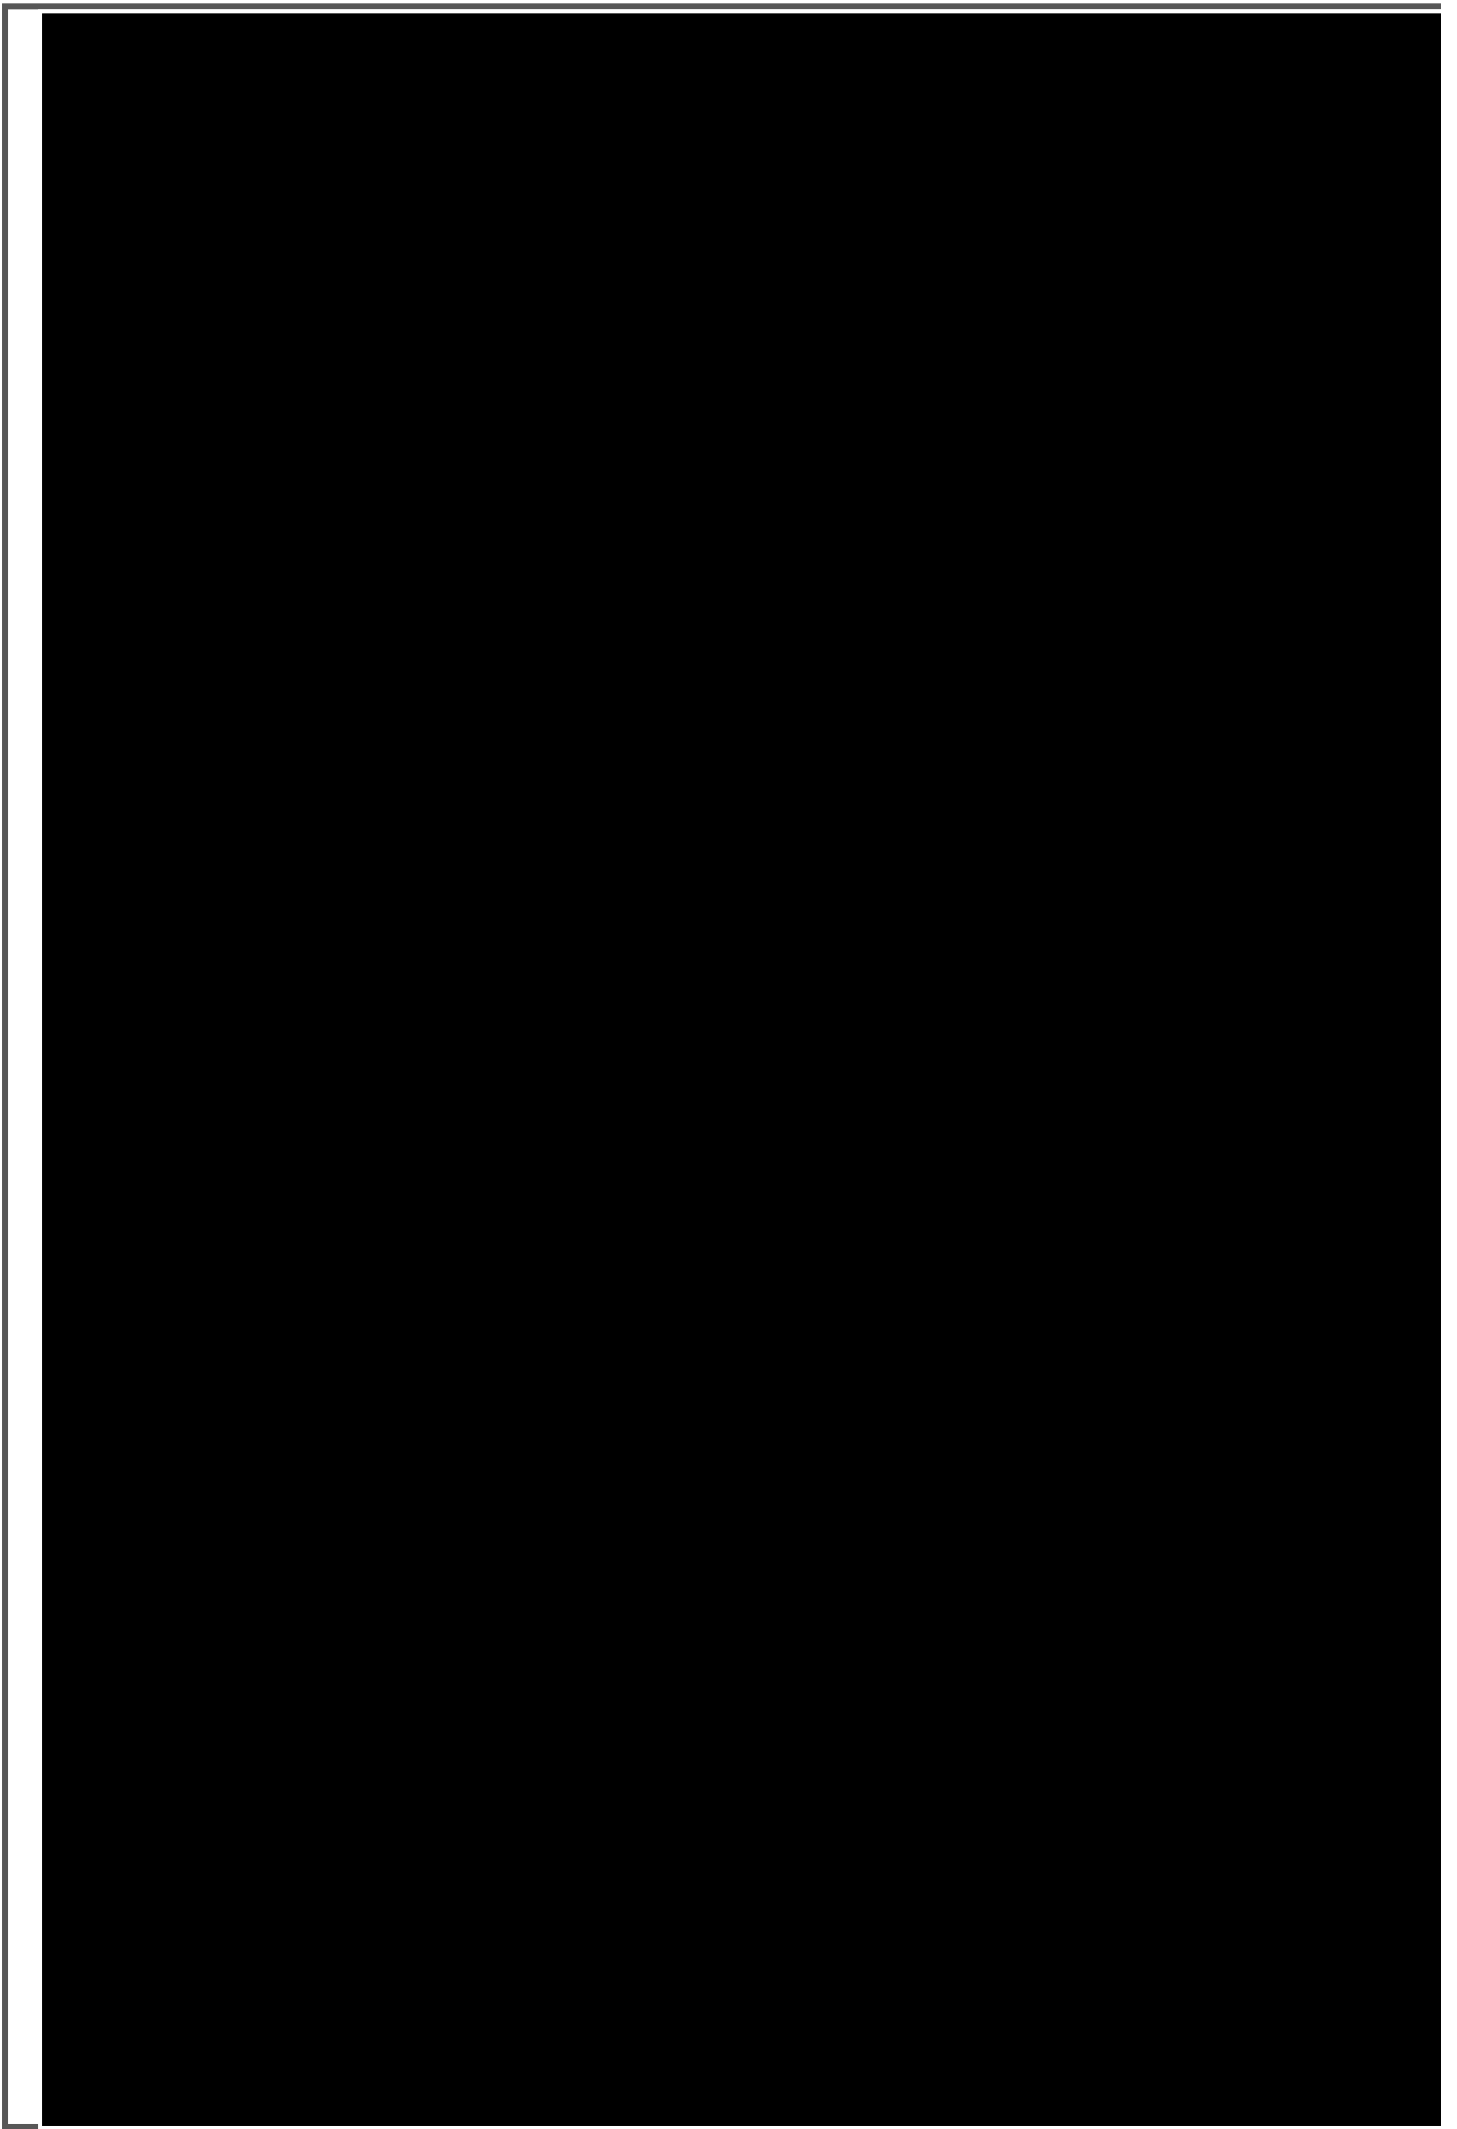

"I was always known as the smart kid. I performed with a band on the side but I had so many gigs that I ended up quitting my engineering job because music took over me being an engineer."

Today, Dante credits his success as a saxophonist to the business education to receive, along with the support of his community.

Dante is proud to return to his hometown of Columbia, South Carolina to release his third album in concert at the Doubletree Hotel and Conference Center, April 12th. For more information, visit www.DanteLewis.Eventbrite.
