Fellow Americans, these links are of videos that everyone should see before the election. This election is painfully close in the swing states and it's going to take constant effort to make things right. It is our job to inform one another (the media is sold out). Please watch and share the following links.

This first link is of a video originally intended for women voters, but can be useful to all voters. It starts by addressing concerns and what can be done (featuring Condoleezza Rice). It gets very positive by the end.

This second link is of Obama stating (near the start of his presidency) exactly how long it should take for all of his spending to work. Some will agree with his sentiment in this video. How about you?

The following link shows us the type of person who controls the media & supports Obama. This recent video is of Ted Turner (CNN, TNT, TBS, Cartoon Network). People like this do Not share our values.

This last link is a brief article on what happened in Benghazi, Libya. Unfortunately, most Americans have not heard the facts. There had been terrorist attacks on that particular embassy a few months prior.

Requests for better security had constantly been denied. CIA Ops were then denied help 3 times during the attack. And No, Obama did not call the attack an act of terror when Sandy Crowley misstated in the 2nd debate that he had. Please read and share the information in the following link.

As we all know, this election is of unprecedented consequence. Please forward this email to everyone you can. The more we try to inform one another, the more likely the right thing will happen for America.

Thank you for your time.
