scstateparks One of the best hidden stories of the South Carolina State Park Service- the rock wall at Lake Greenwood #SCStateParks. On Dec. 7, 1941 the men of the Civilian Conservation Corps who were working on what would become Lake Greenwood State Park left in the middle of the job after hearing about the bombing of Pearl Harbor. The wall at the entrance of this park serves as a reminder of the men who laid down their tools to join the efforts to fight in World War II.
