Things looked pretty good last night, but there's been relatively little progress today, and the Ds (Jackson, for instance) have been talking this afternoon about the budget amendments they'll be offering "next week." Still a fighting chance we can get it wrapped up this week...there aren't that many amendments on the desk at this point, but obviously, that doesn't mean they can't draft more (since the door's not closed on amendments yet).

What are you hearing about what the Senate's plans are? Have you heard anything about them finishing or not finishing this week?

Best part was watching it with the lights off. It's been dripping in my office in 4 different places ever since that downpour this afternoon. Some of the water was falling through the overhead light fixtures.
