BACKGROUND:

The Christopher Gadsden Award

Christopher Gadsden was born in Charleston in 1724. As a businessman, he is best remembered as the builder and owner of Gadsden's Wharf, one of the largest commercial shipping and vessel repair facilities in North America. Located at the foot of what is today Calhoun Street, it had its own lock system, so operations could be conducted around the clock, regardless of tide.

Because of his early and staunch support for independence from Great Britain, Gadsden became known as “The Flame of Liberty”. He was a member of the Continental Congress; served as a brigadier general in the Continental Army; and was twice lieutenant governor of South Carolina.

The Christopher Gadsden Award is presented by the Maritime Association of South Carolina to a person whose local, statewide or national achievements are worthy of recognition. Criteria for selection include sustained leadership in a field or fields related to international commerce and exhibition of vision, integrity and loyalty. The award is not necessarily presented every year. The award is presented during the Annual Dinner and Gala of the Maritime Association of South Carolina.
