Guess Which Merchants Didn't Get Looted in Ferguson

Looters in Ferguson, Mo. , were met with little or no police resistance Friday night and store owners were forced to protect their businesses with their own guns.

One store owner said on the first night of the protesting, "There are no police here. We trusted the police to keep it peaceful, but they didn't do their job."

This is fact... real history, and should be sent to every home in America . Sadly most won't forward this message and many people will quickly delete it, and run and hide from the message contained here.

In essence, they are surrendering to mob rule, thieves and murderers, who turn out in times of trouble to break into stores; steal, burn, and destroy the property of innocent people.

Often, the police hide or watch from a distance; sometimes because they are out-numbered or would be criticized for police brutality if they interfered, and could even be sued if one of these low-life criminals would be injured by them.

Dozens of businesses along West Florissant Ave. in Ferguson , Missouri were ransacked and robbed by rioters, including Target, Dollar General, Wal-Mart, liquor stores, automotive stores and a QuikTrip was burned down.

Hundreds of business owners and their employees had to run and hide in terror as waves of rioters arrived; some with guns.

MANY HIDE THEIR FACES.

Cleanup by shop owners in the after math!

But not everyone cowered in fear... some took action!

History shows us that those who are armed and protecting their homes or businesses cause the thieves to seek easier targets for their violence and theft.

Some businesses in the Ferguson riots escaped looting.

Why these businesses avoided destruction of their property and saved their livelihood should be a lesson for politicians.

Some business owners with their employees and friends stood firm, right outside their establishments, ready to take on all comers.

Why? Because they were armed to the teeth!
