Supporters of the Horry County-centered new 7th congressional district declared victory on Monday as Gov. Nikki Haley signed the congressional reapportionment bill into law. A crowd of about 75 people, many wearing the bright red "Pee Dee wants the 7th district" shirts they wore to redistricting events around the state and some carrying "we did it" signs, watched Haley sign the legislation, which will now go to the U.S. Justice Department for its approval. "You did this," Haley said to the crowd. "You made this happen. The Pee Dee pushed for it. They asked for it. "They showed up in their red shirts. ... The Pee Dee said the 7th belongs to us and we're not giving up." The district includes Georgetown County as well as the Pee Dee region, including Florence, Marion, Marlboro and Chesterfield counties.
