The dollar has strengthened against the euro, making travel in Europe more affordable in 2017. Our cruises in the Mediterranean and Northern Europe provide a terrific way to explore the continent's many cultures and historic landmarks. Each day of your voyage brings new sights, like magnificent Gothic cathedrals, fabled palaces, Old World cities and picturesque harbor towns laced with cobblestone lanes.

We've secured the deepest discounts available for European cruises -- you can save up to 87% on Mediterranean departures, for example.

Today I'll provide some tips to help anyone heading in that direction find a great cruise at a great price. Click any link below for a complete list of options.

Mediterranean cruise itineraries typically range from seven to 14 days and are most numerous from late April through October, although several lines place ships in the region year-round. Many sailings visit Spain, France, Italy and Greece.

Below, I've organized our Mediterranean cruises by the most popular departure ports:

Athens
Barcelona
Genoa
Lisbon
London
Marseille
Monte Carlo
Naples

There also are cruises that concentrate on the British Isles or the Norwegian Fjords.

Here are the most common departure ports for Baltic cruises:
