Check out this amazing sunrise and crawl at Myrtle Beach this morning! The crawl is from a loggerhead that laid her eggs and headed back into the ocean. The eggs were relocated to Myrtle Beach State Park.

Sue Ann Tarkenton So glad we are respecting and protecting our amazing wildlife in SC!

Lisa Seffrin I wonder how the relocation of the eggs will matter when those babies return to lay their eggs. Will they return to where they were originally laid as eggs or the new location? Interesting...

Sue Ann Tarkenton They usually return to the place where they hatched.....if they can. MBSP is protected so it stands a better chance of remaining unspoiled for future hatchlings.
