The smart cities nightmare scenario. How Obama got nerds in the room with tech.

Not rendering correctly? View this email as a web page here.

Wednesday, Dec. 14, 2016
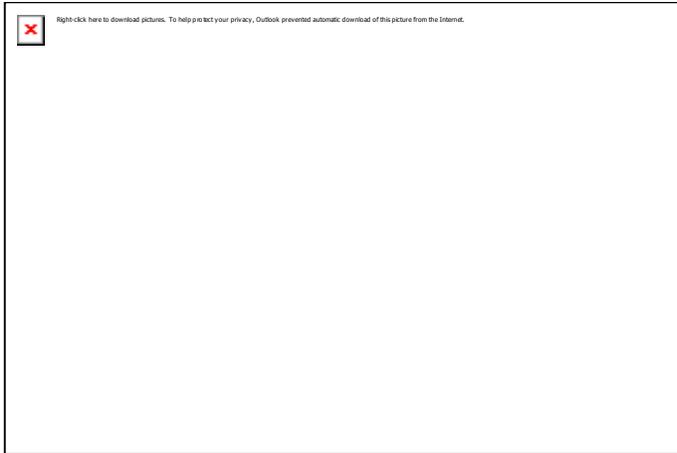

States and feds tangle on autonomous vehicle policy

Transportation officials and automakers fear early state regulations on autonomous vehicles might increase development expenses and delay deployment.

GET THE FULL SCOOP >>
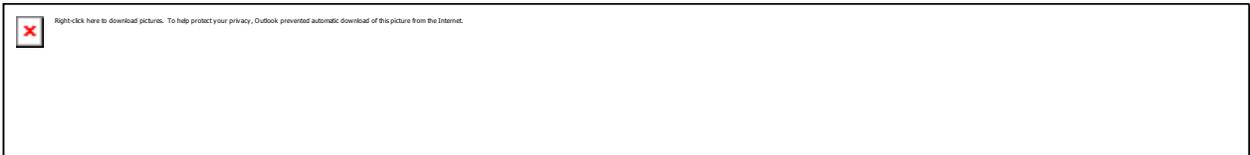

Nightmare scenario: smart cities that are actually dumb

As leaders imagine what the cities of tomorrow will look like, technologists forge onward without a clear plan of where they're going.

Read More >>

Obama's biggest achievement in tech? Getting nerds into the room, DJ Patil says

The president ushered in a design-thinking approach in the White House, leading to undeniable improvements in the way government operates at every level, says the country's first chief data scientist.

Read More >>

Missouri CIO: Innovation takes courage

With four huge modernization projects advancing in parallel, the state's IT chief looks for ways to continually improve.

Read More >>

Right-click here to download pictures. To help protect your privacy, Outlook prevented automatic download of this picture from the Internet.

Right-click here to download pictures. To help protect your privacy, Outlook prevented automatic download of this picture from the Internet.

Right-click here to download pictures. To help protect your privacy, Outlook prevented automatic download of this picture from the Internet.

December 15, 2016 On the Go: Mobilizing the Government Workforce
Online Webinar
Presented by StateScoop

REGISTER

View Details +

Right-click here to download pictures. To help protect your privacy, Outlook prevented automatic download of this picture from the Internet.

Right-click here to download pictures. To help protect your privacy, Outlook prevented automatic download of this picture from the Internet.
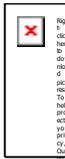

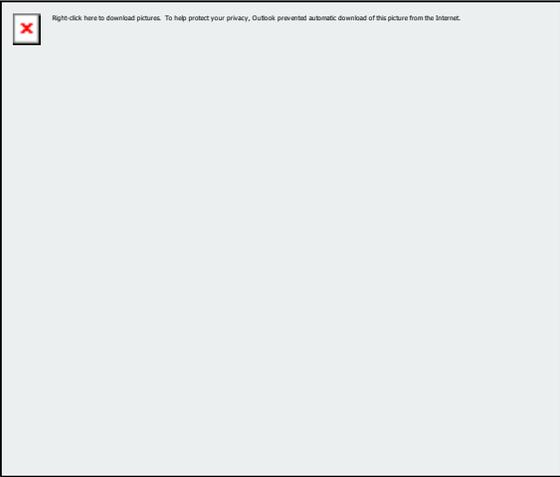

StateScoop is a State & Local government IT media company, a one stop news source and the government IT community's platform for education and collaboration