And I also attached the power point for you to see. It's just a simple way to generate a positive conversation about what's important and to get people aligned or re-aligned to that. It seems we've had a lot of the same experiences and challenges.

Take care

Frank

The South Carolina Quality Forum announces that it will be hosting the South Carolina Governor's Quality Conference in Columbia, South Carolina on October 15, 2014. The program promotes performance excellence, job creation and sustainability in all sectors. Nationally acclaimed speakers will provide training based on best practices from leadership to exceeding customer expectations to achieving organizational excellence. Business, Healthcare, Education, nonprofit, government, and other community executives and professionals are invited to attend this one-day educational and networking opportunity. The awards ceremony will honor the 2014 South Carolina Governor's Quality Award winners. Senior leaders from state government, from the executive and legislative branches, will address the accountability challenge of today's government. Discounts and corporate sponsorships are available. Please see the attached agenda or visit www.scquality.com to register and access the full agenda and conference details.
