Governor Nikki Haley News:

NDTV: South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley Visits Golden Temple in Amritsar

<http://www.ndtv.com/article/diaspora/south-carolina-governor-nikki-haley-visits-golden-temple-in-amritsar-621341>

Indian-American Governor of South Carolina Nikki Haley today paid obeisance at Golden Temple in Amritsar saying that she was there not in the capacity of Governor of state but as a humble human being. Accompanied by her husband, Ms Haley offered prayers at the Sikh shrine. "The peace and serenity of the place is amazing," she said.

Note: "This is the place that has been so frequently talked about by my parents. So many stories, so many memories...and now actually to be in that place is very exciting. It's nice to come back to the place my parents belong to", said Ms Haley-- the youngest sitting Governor in USA.

Note: "It is indeed a blessing to be able to relive some of the memories shared by my parents. It is indeed emotional and heart-warming," Ms Haley said.

South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley became nostalgic and emotional after visiting the Golden Temple in Amritsar on Saturday. She said that she was seeing the temple after 40 years. Haley is on a visit to Amritsar with her husband and an American delegation. She is on a 10-day trip to India.

Note: "This is a very emotional and a very special day for the both of us. What I want everyone to know is that we are here to pay our respects, and, I am not here as governor. I am here as someone who feels honoured and special. It is a very special day." she said.

Nikki Haley, the first Indian-American governor of a state in the US, on Saturday prayed at the Harmandir Sahib, popularly known as Golden Temple, the holiest of all Sikh shrines.

Note: "This is the place that has been so frequently talked about by my parents. So many stories, so many memories...And now actually to be in that place is very exciting. It's nice to come back to the place my parents belong to", said Haley-- the youngest sitting Governor in USA.

Times of India: Attracting investments is my job, building ties a personal desire: Nikki Haley

<http://m.timesofindia.com/india/Attracting-investments-is-my-job-building-ties-a-personal-desire-Nikki-Haley/articleshow/45154403.cms>

Governor of South Carolina Nikki Haley on Friday invited entrepreneurs from Chandigarh and Punjab region to invest in the US state. Extending her state's full support at an interaction on doing business with South Carolina, organized by Confederation of Indian Industry (CII) at its Headquarters in Sector 31.

Note: she said, "India is my second home. Hence, though attracting investments from overseas companies is my job, building business ties with Indian companies is my personal desire."

Note: "The key sectors where you can excel in South Carolina include automobile, aerospace, IT, pharmaceuticals, rubber and textiles. Boeing's leading manufacturing plant is in our state and soon BMW's South Carolina plant would also be their leading plant, so is the case of various top tyre manufacturers of the world like Michelin, Bridgestone and Continental. It is so easy to do business in South Carolina that 60% of the new investments in there are from the existing businesses in the form of expansion," she added.

Post and Courier: Obamacare open enrollments starts Saturday

<http://www.postandcourier.com/article/20141114/PC16/141119586/1177/obamacare-open-enrollments-starts-saturday>

Lauren Sausser

As Obamacare enrollment rolls into year two on Saturday, tens of thousands of South Carolinians are expected to pick a health insurance plan sometime soon. Experts anticipate a smoother launch this time around. The 2014 open enrollment window, which ran from Oct. 1, 2013 through mid-April, will be best remembered for its flaws.

Note: "The news that Obamacare is facing additional legal challenges is hardly surprising," said Doug Mayer, a spokesman for Gov. Nikki Haley, who is traveling in India this week on a trade mission.

Note: Mayer called the case "just one more example of what is possible when a president attempts to force a one-size-fits-all health care program on every state in the country. This law has been a disaster from the start and why Governor Haley has fought against it at every turn."

And speaking of immigrants, Nikki Haley of South Carolina was just reelected to the governor's house in South Carolina. The daughter of Indian Sikh immigrants, she's an accountant who led her mother's family-owned clothing firm into a multimillion-dollar company, was on the board of two chambers of commerce, and served as the treasurer and then president for the National Association of Women Business Owners.

Post and Courier: Districts' promising successes

<http://www.postandcourier.com/article/20141115/PC1002/141119527>

Editorial

The Charleston County School District's first "excellent" rating by the state is both impressive and ironic. It signals significant improvement in student achievement and a welcome drop in the number of "at risk" schools. There had been five. Now there are three. The new rating is the first time CCSD has earned the state's highest rating since the rating system was implemented 14 years ago.

Editorial

More than 1,000 homeowners showing up to voice concerns to state legislators about homeowners associations surely was an impressive turnout but it did not surprise Sen. Greg Hembree and probably not others in the Horry County delegation.

Post and Courier: S.C. needs vehicle inspections

<http://www.postandcourier.com/article/20141115/PC1002/141119530>

Editorial

It is not surprising to those of us who drive in South Carolina daily that South Carolina roads are in need of improvement. Travel delays due to traffic backups and, even worse, accidents impact citizens' daily lives. Talk around the water cooler or after-work "happy hour" conversations often turn to discussions about how to improve the conditions.

Meg Kinnard

Former Sen. Robert Ford has been indicted on eight charges that include misconduct in office, forgery and ethics violations, state prosecutors said Friday. In a news release, Attorney General Alan Wilson said that the Charleston Democrat had been indicted by the Richland County grand jury on misconduct in office and forgery less than $10,000.

Post and Courier: Former Charleston senator Robert Ford indicted on ethics charges
<http://www.postandcourier.com/article/20141114/PC1603/141119623>

Schuyler Kropf

Nearly 18 months after leaving office, former state Sen. Robert Ford was indicted this week on eight counts of violating state ethics laws for allegedly spending thousands of dollars in campaign cash on himself. While the violations cover areas previously explored by the Senate Ethics Committee, the filing of formal charges means Ford is accused of criminal wrongdoing.

Sarah Bowman

A year after the Beaufort County School District began efforts to bring more academic offerings to its schools, students and families can now start planning their picks. The district has decided which "choice" programs will be offered at each county public school, beginning in August 2015. The goal is for students to choose which schools they attend based on the programs offered.

Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar

The second sign-up season under President Barack Obama's health overhaul opened Saturday, with hopes that this time consumers will have a positive experience. But the fear is that entrenched political opposition and renewed legal challenges may yet collapse the program that's bringing health care to millions of previously uninsured Americans.
