Subject: reimbursements

So, I see from Gavin's article, and by looking at ethics filings, that Haley has not reimbursed SLED, DNR or DPS for campaign-related security expenses since January 2015. Why did those payments stop? According to Gavin's article, no one even bothered to review the expenses after she was re-elected. Why?

The explanation can't be that she wasn't running for a second term.

As I reported in November 2013: Herb Hayden said he insisted the agreement specify that the governor reimburse for traveling to anyone's campaign event, not just her own, according to his reading of the law. Going forward, she'll do that, he said.

¶ "It says an election campaign. That's not limited just to her campaign," he said.

What are the 13 trips that Haley is now reimbursing for since January 2015 and how do those reimbursements break down? Why is the Movement Fund paying for it this time? Have those reimbursements been made?
