Business to Business

South Carolina fully certified as work ready

South Carolina became the first state in the nation to be fully certified as work ready. By becoming certified will assist all regions of the state attract new business and retain current business by showing there is a skilled labor pool ready to take on the available jobs. More than 353,000 people have take the WorkKeys test, which measures a person's skills including applied mathematics, reading and critical thinking. Roughly 3,100 businesses are involved in the S.C. Work Ready Communities initiative. Through this initiative businesses also can have their jobs profiled to ensure they hire people with the right skills for their jobs (find out more about this in the story below). See what S.C. businesses are supporting the initiative here.

Job profiling can help you land the prefect new hire

The State Workforce Development Board, through the S.C. Work Ready Communities \(SCWRC\) initiative, will profile any and all of your jobs at no cost. By matching skills and skill levels needed for your company with a WorkKeys test score, SCWRC provides a pool of potential workers that are a good fit for the types of knowledge and soft skills required.
