This week's cat of the week is over it. He's had enough. He simply cannot deal anymore. He wants to crawl into the Canada Dry box of solitude and stay there forever. We feel you buddy, we really do.

While the cat of the week spent his time trying to retreat, other felines faced the universe head on — searching for world domination, a red dot to catch, and a good place to nap. Let's look back at the highlights:

- 1) Cassidy the kitten got his own tiny wheelchair and started living his best little life.
- 2) These cats took a stand to prove that sometimes everyone needs a day off from work once in a while.
- 3) A couple of other wild individuals hit the catnip a little too hard, and they couldn't quite handle it.
- 4) A group of cozy kitties came together to announce that they really do not want winter to come yet.
- 5) And finally, these two Cornish Rex brothers showed off their adventurous side when they went hiking and foraging.

Is your cat a little bit chubby? These facts about fat cats might help you get your feline in better shape. You might even consider getting your kitty his very own iPad, since it's proven to be a great way to get a little exercise in your cat's daily routine.

Ever wonder why your cat always comes into the bathroom with you? It looks like there's actually a pretty good explanation.

As a cat person, you need to have as many feline accessories in your life as possible — and these t-shirts will impress even the biggest of cat lovers. Now even your breakfast can be cat-tastic with this cat-shaped egg mold. Cat people unite, our time has officially come.

If you're in need of a good chuckle, these tweets about cats will definitely keep the giggles coming. After all, everyone needs a little bit of laughter in their lives once in a while.

Finally, Lewison Clark came forward to speak on the highly scientific anatomy of a cat. Did you know that a cat's whiskers are actually called twitchy things? And their eyes are really called peepers? Only a cat could come up with these silly names, and Lewison is here to enlighten you.

What a week for cats! But the madness doesn't end here. Stay tuned to see what these fluffballs will be up to next week in Cat Country.

And those were this week's top stories!

Now onto other news from Cat Country: The Cat With Good Opinions is here to share his thoughts on Halloween. (And if you have a topic you'd like The Cat With Good Opinions to comment on, hit reply to this email — or drop us a note at heyanimals@buzzfeed.com!).

Take it away, The Cat With Good Opinions:

The season is upon us, so it's about time we chat about Halloween. Let's start with the candy corn — the sweet, sugary, delicious morsels of pure happiness and angelic goodness that no other candy in the universe could rival. It might be the best part of the season, next to spicy pumpkin loaves and apple pie. What I'm saying is I'm here for the snacks, I'm all about snacks, and we just entered the ultimate season of snacks.

That being said, people really need to calm down with their obsession with picking fruits this time of year. The apple picking, the pumpkin picking, it's all about the picking. Stop picking, people. Nobody wants to walk around with a 14-foot pole to pull a tiny round fruit that you could EASILY get at the grocery store from a large tree. No one wants to pull a heavy orange wad from a field, carry it around, and then let it rot on their front porch. Stop with the picking — we get it.

The last topic we need to cover is the dressing up. Depending on the individual, a well-fashioned costume can be what I like to call "a dang hoot." Be a hot dog, a live scratching post, maybe even be the elusive red dot. If you choose wisely, you might be the life of your own Halloween party. If you don't, you've still got your snacks, and at the end of the day — that's all that matters.
