Governor Nikki Haley News:

Washington Post: The 5 governors who made the most news in 2015, ranked

Amber Phillips

#1 From her first foray onto the national stage when she won a crowded election to become South Carolina's first female and minority governor in 2010, the Republican Party has touted Haley as a rising star.

Note: But it was the way Haley forcefully put herself at the front of the charge to end displays of the Confederate flag on public property that won her the most praise. As presidential candidates appeared to hem and haw, Haley called for the state legislature to remove the flag from statehouse grounds — something it did shortly after.

Note: "I knew that it was giving a lot of people a pass to do what was right," she told The Washington Post's Abby Phillip.

Post and Courier: Trump responds to Hillary Clinton: 'Nobody respects women more than Donald Trump'

<http://www.postandcourier.com/article/20151230/PC1603/151239953>

Schuyler Kropf

Republican presidential front-runner Donald Trump defended bringing former President Bill Clinton's past into the 2016 race, saying Democratic rival Hillary Clinton had attacked him as the sexist one in the field. "We had to respond to Hillary," he told a cheering crowd of more than 2,500 crammed inside a Westin resort ballroom Wednesday.

Island Packet: Trump blasts Hillary Clinton, Jeb Bush at Hilton Head rally

Chris Lavender

Views are mixed on what impact South Carolina Rep. Trey Gowdy's endorsement of Republican presidential candidate Marco Rubio will have on the race. Gowdy endorsed Rubio during a campaign stop Tuesday in Clinton, Iowa. It wasn't the first campaign stop where Gowdy expressed his support for the Florida senator.
