"Epidemic" of Financial Fraud Techniques Targets the Elderly

Roslyn Myers, J.D., M.A.

The recent Senate Select Committee on Aging report on financial exploitation of the elderly paints a disturbing picture that suggests the problem may be even worse than we thought, with new types of fraud coming to light every day.

California's IHSS Program Accused of Abuse

Dana Shilling, J. D.

California's In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS), which permits payments to informal caregivers, including family members, for providing home care to relatives who would otherwise be institutionalized, was heralded as a promising reform. It hasn't worked as planned.

Supported Decision-Making: Pathway to More Rights or More Wrongs?

Loree Cook-Daniels

Supported Decision-Making (SDM) is premised on the concept that we all have to make our own decisions and direct our own lives, but one of the explicit goals of SDM seems to be to diminish the use of substituted decision-making, also known as guardianship—an approach that may also chip away at vital protections for the elderly and disabled.

Worth Reading and Watching

Robert A. Mead, J.D., M.L.S.

A geriatrician and a specialist in geriatric emergency medicine, both on the faculty at Weill Cornell Medical College, review the key medical and laboratory markers for elder abuse and neglect, and explain how health-care professionals can identify, treat, and report elder abuse.

Quality and Abuse Issues in Nursing Homes

Dana Shilling

California Advocates for Nursing Home Reform give the Center for Medicare Services' "star ratings" a failing F grade.
