The poster features a portrait of Andrew Jackson in the top left, a banner with the event title, and a central image of a person in colonial attire firing a rifle. In the foreground, two young girls are shown, one holding a quill pen. The background shows a rustic wooden building and a forest setting.

Julia Cochran I remember visiting the park when I was little, sitting on the front porch of one of the buildings there and thinking "This is MY park!" (My parents always told us that when we visited a state park.) Later I found out Andrew Jackson was something like my 1st cousin 6 times removed.... so I guess I should have been thinking, "This is my very distant cousin's park...."
