Paid Leave, 'A Good Idea'

Running the issue gamut from civil rights to apprenticeship to retirement security, Secretary Perez addressed a receptive crowd of several hundred on March 2 at Delta Sigma Theta Sorority's 26th annual "Delta Days in the Nation's Capital" gathering. Much of Perez's remarks focused on family economics and specifically paid leave, which he called "not a liberal idea or a conservative idea — just a good idea." Noting that our failure to enact paid leave is out of step with the times, he added: "We live in a 'Modern Family' world, but we've got 'Leave it to Beaver' rules." Delta Sigma Theta is a predominantly African-American public service sorority of more than 200,000 members.

Community leaders and labor activists from Delaware to New England gathered in Boston Feb. 27 to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the A. Philip Randolph Institute, the senior constituency group of the AFL-CIO. Women's Bureau Director Latifa Lyles joined Boston Mayor Marty Walsh, Mass. AFL-CIO President Steve Tolman, and APRI President Clayola Brown at the special commemoration of the statue of A. Philip Randolph, the organizer and first president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. Lyles addressed the group that evening at the "Keeper of the Flame Award" dinner, remarking: "This historic milestone is an opportunity to note the many African American women trailblazers in both the civil rights and labor rights movement who are often missing from documents of history and acclaim."

Wage and Hour Division investigations in fiscal year 2014 determined that more than 270,000 workers in the U.S. were underpaid and due more than $240 million in back wages. On a recent visit to North Carolina, Administrator David Weil met some of those workers, including Irma and Jose, whose earnings at a grocery store averaged about $4 an hour while putting in 12-hour days, six days a week. Weil also spoke with Miriam, another grocery store worker who — after complaining to her employer that she wasn't being paid properly — was told she should be grateful to have a job. "Stories like Miriam's make it clear that while we're making progress in our enforcement efforts, our work must continue," said

Weil. “Too many workers still aren’t properly paid for their hard work. When working people like Irma, Jose and Miriam are deprived of their wages, it not only hurts them and their families but also their coworkers and their communities. It takes courage to come forward to say being deprived of your wages and your rights is not fair. That’s why we focus our efforts particularly on workers who may be hesitant to come forward and complain no matter how bad their working conditions may be.”

Sewing compliance in the garment industry — piece by piece — is the primary goal of the Los Angeles Garment Taskforce. Staff from the Wage and Hour Division, the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office and other federal and state agencies met on March 2 at Los Angeles' City Hall to discuss the rights of garment workers and how to better collaborate to increase garment industry compliance. "This is a great opportunity to work together using creativity, innovation and flexibility" said Juan Coria, the division's deputy regional administrator.

Many housekeepers, cooks, maintenance workers, front-desk clerks and event managers in the Dallas area are working off the clock in violation of the law, the Wage and Hour Division discovered. More than 30 investigations of motels, hotels, hotel managing and hotel staffing agencies in Arlington, Dallas, Garland, Grapevine, Irving, Plano and Abilene found the practice was widespread. As a result, 639 hotel workers will receive $180,000 in back wages. Investigators identified Dallas-based S & A Staffing as a major violator.

The Denison Job Corps is answering the call for skilled workers, a need expressed by Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad and Lt. Gov. Kim Reynolds during a visit to the center on Feb. 26. Center management provided the state's leaders with a tour of the training programs and discussed some of the major construction projects on which recent graduates have worked. "The governor and his team had an opportunity to meet our students and see the future of the state's workforce," said Center Director Steve Reitan. "Many of our recent graduates credit their positions to the training they received through Job Corps." Currently 268 students are enrolled at the Denison Job Corps Center, learning skills such as brick masonry, tile setting, facilities management and carpentry. Medical training also is offered.

Weekly UI Claims
