WEBINAR TOMORROW: An Introduction to Self-Empowered Aging

Aging is inevitable, but increasingly consumers are seeking to age on their own terms by exerting more control over their health and well-being than ever before. This web seminar will explore the factors that have given rise to self-empowered aging, the scientific basis for some of the most popular consumer solutions and the ethical, financial and public policy challenges in consumers seizing control over their own aging. This event is part of a three-part series based on the Fall 2015 issue of Generations. All three web seminars are free and open to everyone and include complimentary CEUs. New Online Certificate Courses Open for Enrollment!

We are excited to announce that a brand-new online course is now open for enrollment! During the five-week Health and Wellness in an Aging Society, expert USC faculty members will explore common health issues faced by seniors, public health in an aging world, and the strategies for caring for older adults with various health challenges. Enroll now.

We are also pleased to announce the return of our popular Fundamentals of Gerontology course! Enroll now in one or both courses, offered exclusively to ASA members in partnership with USC Leonard Davis School of Gerontology. Courses begin October 19, and enrollees receive a certificate of completion after successfully completing each course. Three course options are also available for 2016.
