Last sentence also works- from 2011 to today, 22.8% of jobs announced were in rural areas, and 20.9% of the state's workforce resides in rural areas.

Beth,

Please update these number to reflect the current numbers.

Since taking office, Governor Nikki Haley has focused on creating jobs and improving the business climate in South Carolina. From the start of her administration, Governor Haley has been proud to announce over 57,000 new jobs created and more than $13.8 billion invested in South Carolina. South Carolina's unemployment rate has decreased by over 5% since the beginning of this administration, now at 5.7%. Nearly 25% of the jobs announced are in rural areas, and only 20% of our State's labor force lives in rural areas.
