Subject: Happy Thanksgiving: Setting the Table for Civility

Happy Thanksgiving

Dear Kevin,

During this time as friends and family gather to give thanks, we at the National Institute for Civil Discourse are especially thankful for the many of you who join us in building bridges of civility, listening and respect across the divides in our country.

Before you gather, we invite you to join others around the country who are "Setting the Table for Civility" these holidays and reflecting on what we are thankful for about America and what we can do to revive civility and respect with each other. You might join us in being a little playful and play 20 questions to learn more about each other while answering questions touching upon civil discourse and different aspects of respect and civility.

If you are active in a community of faith, we also invite you to join us between now and year's end in reflecting and joining in the spirit of reconciliation and appreciation of what brings us together as human beings, with love for the best of the human spirit.

Wishing you and yours a lovely Thanksgiving celebration.

We can do more together than we can do alone.
Together we can Revive Civility, Our Democracy Depends On It.

Giving Tuesday is just around the corner! Following Thanksgiving, we have Black Friday, Cyber Monday, and then Giving Tuesday. In case you didn't know, Giving Tuesday was started in 2012 by the 92nd Street Y and the United Nations Foundation as a response to commercialization and consumerism in the post-Thanksgiving season (Black Friday and Cyber Monday). It is a movement to create an international day of Giving. At NICD, we hope you will consider participating in Giving Tuesday and donate to help us Revive Civility in our democracy.
