Governor Nikki Haley News:

Associated Press: SC governor calls for Confederate flag to come down

Seanna Adcox, Jeffrey Collins, Meg Kinnard

South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley said Monday the Confederate flag should be removed from the grounds of the state capitol, reversing her position on the divisive symbol amid growing calls for it to be removed. The Republican's about-face comes after nine black church members were gunned down, allegedly by a young white man who embraced the flag as a symbol of white supremacy.

Note: "150 years after the end of the Civil War, the time has come," Haley said after rousing applause, surrounded by Democrats and Republican lawmakers. "That flag, while an integral part of the past, does not represent the future of our great state"

Post and Courier: Haley: Now is the time to remove Confederate flag from Statehouse grounds

Gov. Nikki Haley moments ago called for the removal of the Confederate flag from the Statehouse grounds, saying the killings of nine church-goers at Emanuel AME in Charleston last week mandated a change in the state's heart. In a bi-partisan gathering inside the Statehouse, Haley said the state "stared evil in the eye" last week when a lone gunman entered the church and opened fire.

Note: "The events of the past week call on us to look at this in a different way," Haley said, adding that now is the time "to remove the flag from the capitol grounds."

Republican Haley, the state's first minority and first woman governor, acted after renewed calls for removing of the flag in the wake of the massacre at Charleston's Emanuel AME Church last week, where nine people, including state Sen. Clementa Pinckney, D-Jasper, were killed by a 21-year-old white supremacist.

Note: "It's time to move the (Confederate) flag from the Capitol grounds," Haley said, flanked by several state lawmakers at the State House during a news conference Monday afternoon. "One hundred and fifty years after the Civil War, the time has come."

Frances Robles, Richard Perez-Pena

Gov. Nikki Haley of South Carolina on Monday called for removal of a Confederate battle flag from the State Capitol grounds, taking sides on an emotional issue, after the white man accused of killing nine black people was seen brandishing that flag in widely circulated pictures.

Note: While Governor Haley said that residents have the right to show the Confederate battle flag on private property, "the State House is different, and the events of this past week call upon us to look at this in a different way."

South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley called for the removal of the Confederate flag from the grounds of the state Capitol Monday.

Note: "Today, we are here in a moment of unity in our state, without ill will, to say it is time to move the flag from the Capitol grounds," Haley said during a news conference attended by Republican senators Lindsey Graham, Tim Scott and other state leaders.

Note: "There will be a time for discussion and debate, but the time for action is coming soon," Haley said. "We know bringing down the flag will not bring back the nine victims," but "we will not allow the symbol to divide us any longer."

In a break from her own position, South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley on Monday called for the removal of the Confederate flag from statehouse grounds. "The time has come," she said to applause. Haley joined other state leaders, including Republican state Sen. Tim Scott and U.S. Sen. Lindsey Graham, in calling for the removal of the flag.

Note: "Today we are here at a moment of unity in our state, with no ill will, to say it is time to move the flag from the capitol grounds," Haley said.

<http://www.abcnews4.com/story/29379729/haley-its-time-to-move-the-flag-from-the-capitol-grounds>

Gov. Nikki Haley on Monday afternoon said it was time for the Confederate Battle Flag that flies on the Statehouse grounds to be removed. The announcement was met with cheers from the crowd.

Note: "We are not going to allow this symbol to divide us any longer," she said, flanked by lawmakers from the Statehouse and the U.S. House and Senate.

Note: "The flag stands for a tradition of history and heritage, but the person who committed the hate-filled murder has a sick and twisted view of the flag," she said. "It does not represent the people of our state. Some see it as a memorial, a symbol of duty. This is not hate, nor is it racism."

WACH: Haley: "It's time to move the flag from capital grounds"

<http://www.wach.com/news/story.aspx?id=1220889#.VYhzFPIVhBc>

Governor Nikki Haley spoke in front of a large audience, including state lawmakers Monday afternoon asking them to take down the Confederate Flag from State House grounds. "It's time to move the flag from capital grounds," said Haley, which was followed by a loud ovation.

Note: "It is my hope that in moving a symbol that divides us, we can move the state forward and honor the souls who are now in heaven," said Haley

Adam B. Lerner

South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley called for the Confederate battle flag to be taken down from out in front of the state Capitol on Monday.

Note: "For many people in our state, the flag stands for traditions that are noble," said Haley. "At the same time for many others in South Carolina, the flag is a deeply offensive symbol of a brutally oppressive past."

Note: "We do not need to declare a winner and a loser here," recognizing that the debate should continue over whether or not South Carolinians fly the flag in private, "but the statehouse is different," she said.

Sam Frizell, Sarah Begley

South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley called on Monday for the removal of the Confederate flag from the Capitol grounds in Columbia, reshaping a heated debate over race and the flag's meaning in a state devastated by last week's massacre at a historic black church.

Note: "For many people in our state, the flag stands for traditions that are noble," she said in a news conference at the state Capitol, in front of American and South Carolina state flags. "For many others in South Carolina, the flag is a deeply offensive symbol."

Harriet McLeod, Luciana Lopez, Alana Wise

South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley on Monday called on lawmakers to take down the Confederate battle flag in the state capitol, a week after a white gunman allegedly shot dead nine black worshipers at a historic church.

Note: "It's time to move the flag from the capitol grounds," Haley, a Republican, told reporters. The flag was a symbol of the pro-slavery South during the U.S. Civil War. "This is a moment in which we can say that the flag, while an integral part of our past, does not represent the future of our great state."

Mark Niquette

South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley called for removing the Confederate battle flag from the State House grounds after the fatal shooting of nine in a historic black church in Charleston. Meanwhile, President Barack Obama said he would attend the funeral of the pastor gunned down in an attack that focused the nation's attention on its lingering legacy of racial hatred.

Note: "That flag, while an integral part of our past, does not represent the future," Haley said. "By removing a symbol that divides us, we can move forward as a state in harmony."
