Hi Rob,

Every year for our Time 100 issue, we ask some of the honorees to tell us about an object that helps them do their work. It can be anything, really—a good luck charm, a special pen, a meaningful book, etc. In the past, for example, Shonda Rhimes told us about the headphones she wears to help herself focus on writing Scandal, Scott Kelly told us about the multitool he uses in space, and Mary Barra told us about a special medallion from her mother that always carries with her. The goal is to give our readers some insight into how our influencers do what they do best.

Think we can make this work with the Governor? All I'd need is a 5- to 10-minute phone interview to discuss the object, plus the name of the object (so we can buy a similar one to photograph) or, if it's unique, the object itself (which we can photograph and send back ASAP). We're hoping to get the name of the object by the end of the week so we can photograph it, and we'd like to complete the interviews in the next two weeks. The final deadline is April 8, but we're hoping to have the object and interviews done by March 30.

Let me know if you have any questions, and I'm happy to brainstorm ideas with you. Fingers crossed for a yes!

Thanks,
