RESOLUTION ON USING THE FEDERAL RULEMAKING MECHANISM AS A MEANS OF CREATING CENTRALIZED CONTROL

WHEREAS, federal agencies implement laws passed by Congress by utilizing the rulemaking process;

WHEREAS, inherent in the separation of powers, and specifically applicable to this situation, Congress has a duty to provide oversight to the activities of the executive branch, including the rules issued by federal agencies;

WHEREAS, the CRS states that the number of federal rules issued annually and the total number of pages in the Federal Register are often referred to as measures of the total federal regulatory burden;

WHEREAS, unfortunately, federal agencies have gone far beyond their duty to “implement” laws, as the number of regulations governing nearly every facet of American life continues to increase unabated;

WHEREAS, in 2014 alone, the Federal Register contained 78,978 pages of agency actions, of which there were 3,541 final rules and regulations, and 659 of those impact small businesses;

WHEREAS, another 2,375 regulations were proposed and are currently awaiting approval;

WHEREAS, a very strong argument can be made that centralized control is the ultimate aim of the vast majority of the total 5,916 new and proposed 2014 federal rules and regulations;

WHEREAS, the increasing importance of unelected federal agencies in structuring the legal environment in which American citizens and businesses operate, and the relative lack of oversight by Congress, represents an erosion of “representative” democracy;

WHEREAS, ever-increasing federal regulatory control can be devastating to a national economy, as reflected by the current economic conditions in the Eurozone; therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the Republican National Committee urges Republican lawmakers to implement a seldom used law – the Congressional Review Act – to void those rules and regulations that exceed the authority of federal agencies to implement laws passed by Congress;

RESOLVED, that the Republican National Committee urges the United States House of Representatives and the United States Senate to review all of the major rules and regulations issued during the past eight years;

RESOLVED, that the Republican National Committee urges individual Republican Congressmen and Senators to propose legislation to overhaul the federal regulatory regime to prevent unelected bureaucrats from setting federal policy.

RESOLUTION OPPOSING OECD'S GLOBAL FATCA COMMON REPORTING STANDARDS

WHEREAS, the implementation of the Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA) worldwide has been assisted by the United Nations-like "Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development" (OECD);

WHEREAS, OECD has devised intergovernmental agreements or "Automatic Exchange of Information: Common Reporting Standards" to avoid breaking privacy laws of other countries, but, they could infringe upon the constitutional rights and privacy all 318 million Americans;

WHEREAS, the central planners at the OECD devised the new global Common Reporting Standards to exchange financial data between governments so they can collect and share individual private financial information with any interested countries, at the country's request, without notifying individuals of the disclosure; putting the private financial data of all Americans in the hands of countries such as China and Russia;

WHEREAS, on October 29th 2014, the OECD succeeded in getting finance ministers from 51 countries to sign an agreement to automatically swap financial information; allowing 51 nations to delve into the privacy and sovereign rights of each nation without reasonable suspicion of criminal activity or any due process;

WHEREAS, the data exchange itself imposes crushing compliance costs on U.S. domestic financial institutions that would be passed on to consumers and taxpayers; the investment bank consulting firm Crossbridge estimates that medium-sized banks will each spend between $150 and $200 million to comply;

WHEREAS, OECD's FATCA Common Reporting Standards violate the U.S. Constitution's Senate Treaty Power due to these statutorily unauthorized, non-treaty intergovernmental agreements between the U.S. Treasury and foreign governments;

WHEREAS, OECD's FATCA Common Reporting Standards negatively impact the U.S. economy, U.S. financial markets, U.S. security, American businesses operating abroad, and especially American citizens who work and reside overseas; therefore be it
