Dear Brian,

It was lovely to speak with you just now. As per our phone conversation I am getting in touch to request an interview with Governor Haley.

The idea would be to write a profile of the Governor - detailing her rise into politics and the influence she is having in the 2016 presidential race. We'd also use the interview to look at the state of the presidential race in South Carolina.

If at all possible, we would do a sit down interview. Ideally that would coincide with the Republican debate in the state later this week?

This is all very flexible though, I understand Governor Haley will have a hectic schedule this week and so we could do it the week after. Or if Governor Haley doesn't want/have the time to sit down for a profile piece, then speaking to her by phone for quicker interview would also work.

A little about me - I am the US Editor for the Daily Telegraph (Britain's biggest quality newspaper). I arrived in the US this summer, after spending four years as the paper's Middle East correspondent, reporting primarily from Iraq and Syria.

Thanks so much for your consideration.

Very best wishes,

Ruth
