Brrrr! Who's ready for a warm up? What are the plans for the holiday weekend? Is anyone visiting a park? Tell us!

Sue Holdren Albrecht After being the only person in Devil's Fork for the last week. Snowed in since Sunday, definety ready for some warm weather

Beverly Malley Simpson My daughter and her friends take advantage of the reduced winter rates and rent a cabin at Santee every year for this weekend. They take turns cooking, watch movies and plan board games. I call it their "Big Chill" weekend. :)

Laura Herbert finally getting a chance to hike the Raven Rock Hiking Trail at "Keowee-Toxaway State Natural Area" - hope to some great scenic shots of Blue Ridge

Laura Herbert due to quite a bit of snow accumulation on the Raven Rock Trail, was only able to go a little ways in before had to turn around on continue on with the Natural Bridge Nature Trail. And must say, even this trail was a bit challenging due to the snow that was left. Do believe going to need to wait until spring to visit this trail again - snow to melt and then trail to dry out.

Laura Herbert decided to go and take some pics of Lake Oolenoy, Table Rock, and Bald Rock Heritage over near Ceasar's Head - Lake Oolenoy was frozen in some areas. Table Rock, did not see any snow from Lake Oolenoy side. And the view from Bald Rock Heritage: gorgeous! Some areas of snow in the distance.

South Carolina State Parks HollyAnn - Jones Gap is still closed from the winter weather. There is a lot of snow and ice on the road leading to the park and the parking lot is covered as well.
