Spartanburg County will not let me obtain a bldg permit even though in the past as a registered architect with an ("unlimited ,assets greater than $250,000") license as a construction manager I was allowed under state law to act as a genl contractor and could obtain a building permit.

However the Association of Genl Contractors must have lobbied the legislators to change that and now one must have a GC license without " grandfathering" people like me who did have that right previously.

In order to get a genl Contractors license I need to take 2 exams which is crazy since I have been building here and previously in NYC for over 40 yrs and I have been a registered architect since 1964.

I just think it is unfair to take away what I have and by the way the SC Dept of Licenses seems dysfunctional, they never return a phone call!

We are not being a user friendly state by doing things like this!

Hey Pete! Hope all is well.

Still working on this situation.

Question:

What happened in the local level for them to deny the most recent permit?

Hey Katherine, have you received any feedback from the Dept of Labor, Licensing and Registration about my ability to obtain a building permit as I have previously been able to do with my construction managers license? Can I somehow get grandfathered ? thanks, Peter
