We teach our alligators to use crosswalks.

www.southcarolinaparks.com/Huntington-beach

Ed Piotrowski WPDE

The alligators at Huntington Beach State Park in Murrells Inlet are all about safety. They know to use the crosswalk when going from one side of the marsh to the other!
Great video via Austin Bond.

Jay Clingman Over at DOT, we've placed these handy Alligator Rulers near every school around the state, so citizens can easily measure any alligator seen crossing the road.
at 7:37:12 on 4/09/2019 UTC

Glenda Farley Kelly N. Holleman oh yeah! They often stop traffic while crossing!

at 7:45:36 on 4/09/2019 UTC

Linda Chybowski-Finnegan Yup, have seen this myself a couple of times there. The gator is going from the fresh water side to the salt water side to hunt probably. We have been going to Huntington Beach State Park for 20 years. Love the place. Lots of big gators
