State Medicaid Expansion Plans: 2015 Recap and 2016 Possibilities

As 2015 comes to a close, Medicaid expansion activity in states has not slowed down. Currently, 30 states and the District of Columbia have expanded Medicaid , and six of these states have chosen to pursue waivers to implement alternative versions of expansion. As the new year approaches, a number of additional states are considering options for expanding Medicaid—either as outlined by the ACA or through waivers—and other states are planning to propose modifications to their existing expansion models. A new blog looks at selected state snapshots to provide a summary of key highlights from 2015 Medicaid expansion activity and what to watch for in the coming year. Read the full summary here .

2015: The State Health Policy Year in Review

NASHP Executive Director, Trish Riley provides a year-end review of state health policy in 2015.

"NASHP has long been a key health policy go-to for states, and 2015 was no different. It's hard to believe it's only been a year since I rejoined the organization. We began 2015 hearing from governors across the country calling for progress in reducing health care cost growth, discussing state based exchanges, improving behavioral health services, and proposing changes to Medicaid programs, investments in prevention, and drug treatment..."
