Safety Planning for Our First Responders

Mark Wynn, Nashville Metro Police Dept (Ret.)

The chances that a domestic violence call will result in injury to either the responder or the victim are greatly reduced when officers are trained on what to expect and how to act when an incident appears to be escalating towards lethality.

Civil Orders of Protection: Promoting Safety

Nancy Hart, National Council of Juvenile & Family Court Judges

A panel of experts charged with updating the NCJFCJ's "Burgundy Book" on orders of protection has developed a new set of guidelines that reflects recent changes in state laws and better integrates multi-disciplinary approaches to protecting victims.

Components of Batterer Intervention Programs That Promote Victim Safety

Cheryl R. Davis, Colorado Division of Criminal Justice

Batterer Intervention Programs have always been controversial, but evidence now suggests these programs can make victims safer.

What Can I Do? Advice to Help Keep Friends and Loved Ones Safe

Gretchen Shaw, National Coalition Against Domestic Violence

In her work with local shelters and victims and experts from around the country, NCADV's Gretchen Shaw has compiled a uniquely practical set of guidelines for anyone who wants to help a friend, co-worker, or family member enduring abuse.

Strategies for Survivors of Domestic Violence: Enhancing Safety and Exit Planning

Rose Garrity, National Coalition Against Domestic Violence

Here are the essential elements of an effective safety plan, addressing the critical factors for survivors fleeing with children, pets, and financial and personal belongings.
