Terry Ann Skinner I have three catlapa, seven red maple saplings, and digging up three hickory nut saplings from my father's flower bed. All are being replanted in better locations. Squirrels, no matter how much they can be a nuisance, especially to those of us who like to put out seed for birds.....are mother natures best tree planters. At least getting them started. It's our job to find the 'start ups', dig them out of the inconvenient place the squirrels put them and place them where they will provide shade for us in the future. THANKS to ALL OUR

Terry Ann Skinner Hope all of you have more than one email address. Found this today:

trees under which we know full well we will never sit." -Elton Trueblood

Shelley Green Robinson Thanks to squirrels, I have a healthy oak sappling growing in the middle of a gardenia bush on one side of my yard. Those two are directly under a power line, so the tree has to be destroyed or moved before it interferes. On the other side of my yard, another gardenia has a healthy oak and a healthy pecan sappling growing out of it. Those are growing near my neighbor's phone line and should be moved too. One or the other might be okay on that side, but they are too close to each other for all three to stay.
I hate to destroy the trees, because one day they could be awesome speicimens , but I love my sweet smelling gardenias and they are much better suited to being under power/phone lines. I don't know how to save everything and don't have a job, so money isn't available to bring an arborist here to help me.
