Here's your nature lesson for this evening courtesy of Ranger Dawn from Musgrove Mill State Historic Site! Check out this video of a kingsnake eating a copperhead. It first squeezed the copperhead to kill it, and then enjoyed it for dinner. Amazing stuff!

Kalin Clark-Kincaid That's why they're called Kingsnakes. The people who keep large quantities of different types of breeding snakes will feed the results of a bad clutch to their Kings if they have them. Also, I've heard of keepers picking roadkill snakes off of the road to feed to their Kingsnakes.

Jon Doe I had a California king and it was black and yellow and when it became an adult yellow was supposed to turn white but it stayed yellow when unfortunately somebody that gave it to me for free headed in a tank with sand and I kept taking the sand out and cleaning and stuff but I should have changed it I think I don't know something came hanging out at bottom of it and I've been doing snakes bird for years I'm 54 I've been doing them since I've been 8 catching them but anyways I gave it the right the right proper stuff and it and it went back in and it looks fine and healthy but it did die 2 weeks later my you just been all but anyways yes king snakes are awesome they're the best man right now I still have a carpet python on Mexican send a lawn and a baby ball python I bought my grandson and even that I want to get ahold you know a whole reptile room I'd really like to run a whole house with an addict and an extra room and do it all off but all I got a snapping turtle to I found the size between a quarter and dime which people don't blame me or they don't get that smile what was that smile and it's it's shell was like paper I think a bird drafted and I live in the city at Amherst and Grant but I think it came from the bike path in the creek right behind me which runs through a Forest lawn cemetery and I've seen huge Sean there anyways now he's a year-and-a-half all the beginning of winter he'll be to next winter and he's already he sells got2b six to seven inches around and he's here she I think it's a she she's she's doing great man and she's friendly as can be thanks guys for the video

Jon Doe that kind of snake was really hungry let me tell you I know takedown rattlesnake Sunny that they don't care no flight hunting rattlesnakes used to run in and turn around for him but about 10 years ago they realize that even turn around before him was no good because king snakes about 10 years ago and became so immune to venom that won't even phase him her phone down so now I'll rattle snakes usually just keep running and try to outrun them I know what I'm talkin about these call me pet shop heater not 52 for nothing you gained some wisdom but any other find pet shop twice two two different pet stores and I used to have one the pet store but anyways the great video man sorry for talking so much again later

Brandy Taylor Cassy Clary really? Even though it's none of your business, I had three small kids any the time and my husband found it and put it in a jar so our kids could look at it so we could teach them which snakes were which because we live in the country and my kids actually played outside. FYI

Nicole Griffith Wilson If you would have filmed from distance it wouldnt have had to eat so fast

at 21:05:21 on 5/24/2020 UTC

Brian Kepner You should always help king snakes. They eat Rattlers and other problems snakes as well as mice. Pretty much good luck all around

John Hayre I have rescued kingsnakes in town and brought them home to the country for many years. Black ratsnakes are cool too.

Christian Suttles Morgan I found this guy by our back steps the other day! A man who came to install our pool moved him into the woods behind my house for me.
