Smart Cities Now

The world's go-to source for smart city news & trends

4 proven steps to save water and money (Atlanta and DC are using them already)

If your city hasn't faced a water crisis yet, it's only a matter of time: 70% of the world's production areas will face shortages by 2050. Here are four steps you can take now to not only save a precious resource — they will also save you money.

Compassionate Cities

German e-health pilot will use sensors to monitor the elderly

The city of Dusseldorf is teaming with ZTE Corp. and Telefonica Deutschland on a preventive healthcare pilot that will leverage digital technologies to enable older people to live safely and longer in their homes. Click to learn more about it.

Microsoft and Toyota want to make your cars safer -- and easier to drive

With so much hope focused on how connected cars and self-driving cars will help cities cut traffic congestion and reduce accidents, there's some good news from Toyota and Microsoft. The two companies are working together to develop more and better connected services for drivers -- services that will make driving safer and far more convenient at the same time.
