As smartphones, tablets and other connected devices continue to dominate the daily lives of citizens, government agencies across the country are struggling how to bring their workforce to the same level of connectivity. While some agencies chart courses forward, some end up lagging behind because of security, privacy and productivity concerns.

December 15, 2016 // 1 to 2 PM EST

During this webinar, experts discuss the issues and challenges state and local government agencies face when it comes to making their employees more mobile. Going beyond just enabling telework anywhere, officials will also detail where they see mobility going and how government can move mobility from a challenge to an opportunity.

Key takeaways include:

- How your government should evaluate and establish its mobility program
- How better access to mobile technology can enable government employees to be more productive
- Ways to leverage mobility as a recruitment and retainment tool for the next generation workforce
