Hi Chaney,
Thank you for getting back to me.

For this particular spot in the magazine, we were looking for something a little bit longer (150-200 words) and with language different from her Mar. 4 statement—remarks that are more an appreciation of Pat Conroy's work, that put his accomplishments in context, that talk about why his books were important/should be read, why he is important to South Carolina/what Americans learn about the state's culture through his works. Here's an example: <http://time.com/3512666/barack-michelle-obama-congratulate-malala-yousafzai/>

Please let me know whether this kind of remembrance would be possible or not at your soonest convenience today. If it's easier for Gov. Haley to talk about these points on the phone for 10 mins, we could also set up that, whatever is easiest.

Thank you again for your time,

Olivia,
You can find some words from the governor below. Please let us know if you need anything else.

South Carolina lost a beloved son last Friday night, as Pat Conroy passed away surrounded by his loving family. He will be missed but we can all find comfort knowing his words and love for South Carolina will live on forever. Please join me and Michael as we lift the Conroy family up in prayer.

Hi Chaney:

I'm writing from TIME magazine, where we'd like to invite Nikki Haley to write a remembrance of Pat Conroy for the Milestones page of the next issue.

It would only have to be about 150 words, filed by email. Deadline to submit the text would be end of day Tuesday, March 8.

Alternatively, we could schedule a phone call and write it "as-told-to" style if that would be more convenient.

Is this something she would be interested in and willing to do? Please let me know as soon as possible today.

Thank you a thousandfold for your time,

Olivia B. Waxman
