International Trade---a world of opportunity for South Carolina agriculture

In order for us to keep our farmers farming and our economy thriving, we must be able to grab a bigger piece of the global pie. With 96% of the world’s consumers outside our nation’s borders, interest in exporting is high and the competition is great. For South Carolina to prosper, we can not afford complacency in the global agricultural marketplace. Nor, can we isolate ourselves from the rest of the world.

Agricultural exports in South Carolina continue to increase due to the continued market development that is underway. The cash value of the state's agricultural exports has increased $18.3 million in the last year from $326.6 million to $344.9 million. With export assistance programs in international marketing, South Carolina is able to compete for foreign trade and reverse investment.

What does South Carolina export? In the last USDA agricultural trade report (1999-2000), South Carolina’s food and food source exports were listed as poultry products, soybeans and soy products, fruits and fruit preparations, meat (excluding poultry), vegetable preparations, peanuts and peanut oil, and other raw and processed products. But, we also offer a wide array of processed foods---many that are unique to our state. Almost every food or food-related product produced in South Carolina can find a market somewhere outside our nation's borders.

Marketing South Carolina products here and abroad is essential to the continued viability of agriculture in the state. The SC Department of Agriculture is committed to expanding and developing new markets both internationally and domestically. Specialists are responsible for providing marketing and promotional assistance in all areas of agriculture including: livestock, row crops, ornamental horticulture and floriculture, fruits and vegetables, and specialty products. In addition, our International Marketing Development Specialist works with other organizations to assist companies throughout the state in marketing their products abroad.

The US Food Export Showcase, sponsored by the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) and supported, in part by the Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS), is an annual trade show held at Chicago’s McCormick Place each May. The Showcase, held in conjunction with the Food Marketing Institute’s annual International Supermarket Industry Convention and Educational Exposition, is a great place for food and beverage producers, processors, and suppliers to show (and sell) their wares to the world.

From May 6th through the 8th, more than 6,000 high profile international buyers from over 100 countries will have the opportunity to stroll through the vast hall to examine, taste, and purchase food products from South Carolina and the nation. At the 2000 US Food Export Showcase buyers generated more than $25 million in sales. This year, Showcase planners expect to generate $50 million in sales.

In the past, South Carolina companies have displayed products like Bubba Grits Chips, Yalsa Salsa, Raspberry Bites, Broccoli Bites, Doggie Bites, pecans, snack foods, confectionery items, tea, sauces, convenience foods, cookies, and other bakery items. This year’s companies involved in the 2001 US Food Export Showcase include: Colony South of Charleston, International Industries, Corp. of Spartanburg, and NutriSolutions of Conway. Their products range from bakery items and convenience foods to functional foods and beverages to snacks.

South Carolina has a list of international trade success stories---many of which originated with contacts from the US Food Export Showcase. These trade successes have significantly benefitted our producers and processors throughout the state. Young Pecan of Florence exported pecans to Canada and Europe; the Charleston Tea Plantation sold tea to Japan; Manchester Farms of Dalzell exported quail to Canada and the United Kingdom; AgriSales/Columbia Farms shipped poultry to Taiwan, Japan, and Hong Kong; Yonce Farms of Johnston exported peaches to Canada, and Transcon Trading of Columbia exported equine supplies to the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, and Japan.

In addition to the US Food Export Showcase, South Carolina companies will also be participating in the American Food Fair 2001 on May 19th through 22nd at McCormick Place. NASDA launched the American Food Fair in conjunction with The National Restaurant Association (NRA) Show to give US Food and Beverage Exporters another excellent trade opportunity. This year Young Pecans of Florence and Mrs. Smith’s Bakeries will join the 2,000 other exhibiting companies and 50,000 registered participants of the NRA Show.

The bottom line is that the best quality products, agricultural and non-agricultural, are not worth a plug nickel, if someone, somewhere doesn’t buy them. Marketing is important, especially marketing abroad. So, to those who have said that we need to concentrate on selling our products here, don’t be too quick to criticize the value of foreign markets. Agricultural exports mean jobs and revenue for all of us. International agricultural trade is truly a world of opportunity for South Carolina !!!

For more information about the exporting agricultural products, call Roy Copelan at 803-734-2211.
