

From: Soura, Christian
To: lillian.b.koller@dss.sc.gov <lillian.b.koller@dss.sc.gov>
Date: 6/13/2013 10:01:47 AM
Subject: FW: SIB Lab announces competition winners

---

Hi Lillian,

There's been a little local and national coverage of Harvard's announcement on SIBs this week. The press release below gives a decent background, and there's a brief quote from the Governor in the Washington Post story linked below.

If you have any interest in hearing more about SIBs, let me know. Jeff Liebman from Harvard will be in town next Thursday, if you want to spend some time with him. One of the intermediaries (Third Sector Capital Partners) will also be here next Friday if you want to hear about or discuss other pay-for-success models they've participated in around the country. Thanks.

CLS

Christian L. Soura
Deputy Chief of Staff

(803) 543-0792
ChristianSoura@gov.sc.gov

---

From: Sellman, Alina [mailto:Alina\_Sellman@hks.harvard.edu] On Behalf Of hks-siblab
Sent: Monday, June 10, 2013 3:21 PM
Subject: SIB Lab announces competition winners

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

The Harvard Kennedy School's Social Impact Bond Technical Assistance Lab (SIB Lab) is pleased to announce the next six governments who will be receiving our technical assistance to develop pay-for-success contracts using social impact bonds (SIBs). These governments are:

- Colorado/Denver
- Connecticut
- Illinois
- New York
- Ohio
- South Carolina

They were selected in a national competition funded by The Rockefeller Foundation.

Read the full press release here. Read the story in today's Washington Post here. For further information about our work, please visit www.hks-siblab.org.

Regards,

Jeffrey Liebman
Malcolm Wiener Professor of Public Policy and SIB Lab Director
Harvard Kennedy School