State, Local Labor Rules May Rise To Counter Pro-Biz Trump

On Tuesday, Washington, D.C., became the latest municipality to institute a generous paid family leave policy, with eight weeks' child-care leave and six weeks to look after sick relatives, continuing a trend of employee-friendly local and state regulations that management-side attorneys believe could accelerate as the incoming Trump administration effects a more pro-business mindset.

Obama Admin. Ends 'Obsolete' Visitor Registration Program

The Department of Homeland Security announced Thursday it's scrapping an 'obsolete' program once used to track men from countries with sizeable Arab and Muslim populations, in the wake of expressed concerns from civil rights groups and political leaders that it could be used by President-elect Donald Trump to create a registry for Muslims.

Dems Push Trump To Keep Obama OT Pay Expansion Intact

A group of 18 congressional Democrats, led by Sen. Patty Murray of Washington and Rep. Bobby Scott of Virginia, have urged President-elect Donald Trump not to scrap the U.S. Department of Labor's rule expanding overtime protections to millions of white collar workers, which was a signature initiative of the Obama administration.

NC Pols Don't Undo Bathroom Law Despite Apparent Deal

North Carolina lawmakers were unable to follow through on a plan Wednesday to repeal the state's infamous law requiring transgender people to use public bathrooms and other facilities that correspond to the sex on their birth certificates, just days after incoming Gov. Roy Cooper had brokered a potential deal to scrap the law.

The Biggest NJ Policy Developments Of 2016

A deal to boost transportation funding, waterfront access rules and the state takeover of a struggling Atlantic City were among New Jersey's defining legislative and regulatory measures in 2016, but the year also was marked by failed efforts to increase the minimum wage and give raises to judges.
