Smart Cities Now

The world's go-to source for smart city news & trends

Innovation drives traffic safety

Memorial Bridge in Portsmouth, NH will soon have integrated structural, traffic and environmental monitoring programs. It's one of nine cutting-edge traffic safety improvement projects funded by the Federal Highway Administration. Any ideas your city could borrow? Grants are still available.

Free workshops tackle drought, urban blight and more

Learn how data helps tackle urban blight. How the Internet of Things battles drought. And how your city can ready itself for a smart city journey. All three are free workshops offered at Smart Cities Week, Sept. 15-17 in Washington, D.C. Click the headline for details.

Car2Go begins upgrading fleet

Car2Go vehicles are shared vehicles, but the latest generation of them will provide a much more personalized experience. Daimler is rolling out the latest models in Vancouver, B.C. now. See how the service aims to get more people out of their own cars.

City of Odense gains efficiency with cloud-based tools

Odense Municipality in Denmark wanted a way to streamline its governmental organization and replace an outdated email solution. Read in this case study about the efficiencies municipal employees gained when the city migrated to Microsoft Office 365.

Improving lives with data

Eight U.S. cities will get help using data to improve citizens' lives and to make government more effective. They were selected for Bloomberg Philanthropies' What Works Cities program. Learn how each of them plan to better leverage their data resources.
