Quote from Haley press secretary Chaney Adams, "Being that the ACLU purportedly exists to protect American's civil liberties, one would think they'd be more supportive of Governor Haley choosing to exercise her freedom of religion."

Chaney,

Good morning! My name is DaShawn Brown, a reporter with Live 5 News in Charleston, SC.

I spoke to the Executive Director of the ACLU (SC), who said the group has requested information regarding Governor Haley's participation in The Response, a prayer rally being held tomorrow in North Charleston.

They've questioned whether taxpayer money, as well as other state/government resources, have been used in the planning and promotion of the event.

My goal is to be fair, and allow your office ample opportunity to respond to this claim.

I don't know that there's anyone in Charleston to respond in person, but at the very least, if there's a response you can send, I hope to share that with our viewers.
