- 1) Health Care Access: Relationships with local medical, dental, and mental health service providers will be cultivated in the months prior to opening. WR Home Office staff will consult with South Carolina's State Refugee Health Coordinator to develop a plan to administer health screenings. Staff will then meet with potential service providers on site in August 2014, to evaluate capacity, cultural competency, language availability and/or comfort working with an interpreter, and Medicaid/RMA acceptance. Consideration will also be given to providers' proximity to refugee housing and public transportation. Once providers gain experience administering screenings and making follow-up referrals as needed, it is anticipated that WR Spartanburg's modest caseload of 60 arrivals should result in few delays in service. Prior to assurance, refugees' biographical data will be shared with the State Refugee Health Coordinator and local care providers to ensure that services are available. WR Spartanburg staff will contact providers to schedule appointments and share medical documents as soon as arrivals are confirmed. Additional pertinent information obtained after arrival will be transmitted to providers as needed.

- 2) Refugees with Special Needs: Until working relationships with local care providers are established as described above, WR Home Office will avoid sending cases with advanced medical issues to WR Spartanburg. If complex cases are identified, WR Spartanburg and Home Office staff will consult with the State Refugee Health Coordinator during the pre-assurance and pre-arrival phases to discuss particular needs and whether local services are sufficient to serve the case. With regard to non-medical special needs, particular priority will be placed on connecting single parent cases with caring, well-trained co-sponsors, who will assist with housing, child care, tutoring, life skills training, and employment. Although resources for LGBTI individuals are fewer than elsewhere in the country, several groups hold monthly support groups and social events in the Upstate region.
- 3) Public Outreach: WR Spartanburg will initiate a broad-based outreach to local stakeholders, including churches, community groups, public K-12 schools, colleges and universities, law enforcement, government agencies, elected officials, employers, rental property owners, medical and mental health care providers, and the community at large. WR Spartanburg will hold public information sessions, utilize local media such as newspapers, radio, and television, and address questions and challenges through frequent communication. Public events, such as a "grand opening" for the new office and World Refugee Day observances, may be organized to raise awareness and encourage celebration of refugee resettlement in the Upstate region. Social media, electronic, and print content will be made available to introduce WR Spartanburg, explain its mission and services, recruit volunteers and donors, and above all, cultivate a supportive, welcoming environment for new arrivals.

- 5) Volunteer and Co-Sponsorship Programs: Successful integration into any community depends largely upon mutually supportive relationships with one's neighbors. Therefore, WR Spartanburg will strive for as many refugees as possible to be introduced to their new environment through contact with co-sponsors and volunteers. The goal for FY 2015 will be for 10 cases to be served by Good Neighbor Teams, comprised of church and other community groups who commit to co-sponsor a given refugee case. WR Spartanburg staff will train these teams to assist with R&P services such as apartment furnishing, clothing and household item donations, transportation to and from appointments, cultural orientation, tutoring English, employment and life skills training, and help navigating public transportation. Although Good Neighbor Teams initially agree to serve their case for a limited time (usually coinciding with the 90-day R&P service period), it is hoped that, through repeated, informal contact, co-sponsorships will evolve, as the project name suggests, into a network of good neighbors who support one another for years to come. WR Spartanburg will also welcome individual volunteers, who will be trained to serve according to their interests and availability.
- 6) Grievance and Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse (PSEA) policy and plan: World Relief has a corporate Grievance Policy (#0540) and a PSEA Policy (#0560). In addition, Policy #0566, "Protection of Children: Code of Conduct" incorporates the IASC's six core principles.
