Subject: There is much to be grateful for this year

November 21, 2012

With Thanksgiving only hours away, I want to take a moment and reflect on the many things that I am grateful for this year.

I have been fortunate my whole life to be surrounded by great people. Those here at Commerce are no exception. I am profoundly grateful for all that "Team South Carolina" has accomplished since I began as Secretary in 2011. My theory is that when you get a lot of smart and talented people together, good things happen; my colleagues prove me right each day.

In less than two years, we have helped bring nearly 30,000 jobs to South Carolina and generated more than $8 billion in investment. South Carolina is a leader in the nation's manufacturing renaissance, and has garnered global recognition for its business-friendly climate and skilled workforce. Our focus on building and maintaining solid, trustworthy relationships with companies we work with sets our economic development team apart.

JTEKT Corporation, an automotive systems and industrial components supplier, is expanding its Koyo brand bearing manufacturing facility in Richland County, South Carolina.

The $130 million investment is expected to generate 175 new jobs over the next three years.

"South Carolina continues to prove to companies from around the globe that it is the right place to do business. We celebrate JTEKT Corporation's decision to invest $130 million and create 175 new jobs in the Midlands area. By further strengthening our state's business-friendly climate and developing our workforce talent, we can continue to expect more job-creating announcements like this one," said Gov. Nikki Haley.
