WHOOOOO'S ready for Monday? Can you find the barred owl in the tree? This photo was taken at Lee State Park by Laura Kirk!

Laura

This is one of my favorites from Lee State Park - well camouflaged barred owl sitting in a tree on Mulberry Island near the Lynches River.

Debra Parham So cute

Scott Beach Nice! I love their call. We have some in our back yard and when they get into a conversation it is an absolute riot.

Denise McWhorter Beautiful shot! Amazing how camouflaged he is! A couple of steps to the right and one would really have to look hard to see him.

Lisa Burley Eddings Our Cub Scout Webelos den is headed to Lee State Park for an overnigher this coming weekend, and then the rest of the pack will come on Saturday, would be nice to see this beautiful creature on our leave no trace scavenger hunt.

Daphne Gibson that is a beautiful park. We took some of our daughter's graduation pics on the boardwalk. They turned out beautiful! The backdrop is unreal.

Debbie Ferrell Webber Who could miss that big ole thing! But it's beautiful just the same.

Lauren Larrow Saw my first owl since living here about a month ago. Looked just like this one. He blended well too, I was so thrilled to have spotted him. Some little birds were behaving irracily, so I looked up to see what was causing their concern. There he was... about 2 o 2-1/2 feet tall from what I could estimate. He was sitting 50 or 60 feet up. Very cool.
