Smart Cities Now

The world's go-to source for smart city news & trends

Money matters less in smart investments

When we think of investments, we usually think of money. But a growing number of cities are finding that finances may only be the second most important part of their smart cities initiatives. Find out why.

5 cities, 5 smart ideas

Read how Dubai's Smart Palms supply more than just shade (Wi-Fi, for instance)... Learn about Pittsburgh's new roadmap to inclusive innovation... See how Superfast Cornwall provides jobs and other economic benefits... Read why pooling private security videos is helping Baltimore police fight crime... and see how a new smart bus system will reduce time spent waiting at bus stops in Spokane.

Experience augmented reality at Smart Cities Week

Civic Resource Group International will demonstrate the next generation in mobile technology for smart cities at Smart Cities Week. CivicAR™ is the first Mobile Augmented Reality solution that enables public sector agencies to deliver information and services directly to citizens and communities in a highly contextual and easy to use mobile environment – and you can experience it firsthand with a free exhibition pass. Get your pass, then get the app. Can't attend? Follow the action on Twitter at #smartcitiesweekDC

Milwaukee: giving water its due

While many cities battle long-term drought conditions, others are blessed with an abundance of water. Learn how Milwaukee, Wisconsin took advantage of that abundance to build a growing water-based economy -- and its plans to become a global water marketplace.
